Definition of assignment of rights

The assignment of rights is the act by which all the authors of the work assign to the Journal of Virtual Archaeology Review (hereinafter VAR) the rights on the work for the first distribution, reproduction and public communication through the UPV portal / PoliPapers journal (<https://polipapers.upv.es/index.php/var>) which are managed by the Universitat Politècnica de València.

Authors

The authors of the work are those individuals that appear and are identified as such in the same.

Statement of responsibilities

The acceptance of the work by VAR entails the commitment of all authors in relation to:

- That the work is original, both the text and the illustrations, on which the author owns the copyright and has no commercial commitment that could generate conflicts over its publication.
- That the work has not been published before or sent to another journal for consideration, in any other printed or electronic format, or in any other language.
- That the author has participated substantially in the work, both in the research carried out and in the final wording.
- That they are aware of the final version of the work and that it will be published in open access in the UPV / PoliPapers journal portal.

Terms of the assignment

As author of the work I hereby declare the transfer of exploitation rights on the first public communication of the same to VAR in a non-exclusive way through the UPV / PoliPapers journal portal.

The authors are responsible for any litigation or claim related to copyright, holding VAR fully harmless from any responsibility.

VAR, through the UPV / PoliPapers journal portal, is responsible for the dissemination in free access under a creative commons license of the type CC BY Recognition of the article and guarantees its preservation.
